The Manchester (N. H.) Union goes Woodrow Wilson one better in alliteration, in an editorial entitled, "Watch, Wait, Wobble, Withdraw."

The Democrats will issue bonds for $130,000,000 to cover the cost of military operations in Mexico and along the border. That is another item to be charged to the Woodrow wobble. What have we to show for it? Villa is again on the war path.

The twelve land credit banks which the new rural credits bill establishes will call for nine million dollars of capital. It is not expected that individual subscriptions will provide much of this—so the federal treasury, already working under extreme pressure, will have to come forward with the necessary funds.

It is unfortunate for the country that the public is ready to accept the theory that President Wilson played politics with the threatened railway strike. But what else could be expected in view of the way he has played politics, or tried to play it, with so many important questions? If he had not shifted and reversed on so many issues when he found himself on the unpopular side, there would be more confidence in his sincerity.

Representative Switzer of Ohio: "Now, my Democratic friends, it is constitutional in this particular industry to resort to a tax and levy a tax on imported dyestuffs to nurture and encourage this industry, why is it not constitutional and a wise policy to levy duties all along the line in order to nurture and build up and maintain and protect American industry?"

"A million shells a day are hurled by allies' guns on the Somme, and the Germans reply with fury," says a headline in a Democratic paper which denies that we are enjoying a "war-order" prosperity. Back of those million shells a day is an army that must be fed and clothed, equipped and transported. We are furnishing a large part of the food and clothing, the guns, the automobiles and aeroplanes. The Democratic press would do well to discontinue its news columns if it wants its readers to believe its editorial columns.

Democrats profess supreme confidence in their ability to re-elect the President—or, perhaps, better phrased, in the ability of the President to re-elect himself. Yet when the topic is taken up in detail, state by state, there are many essential elements lacking to a successful computation. They expect no electoral votes in New England. They doubt if they can carry New York. They know that they cannot carry Illinois or Ohio and that the chances are against them in Indiana. There is an axiom in mathematics that the whole is equal to the sum of its parts—yet Democratic leaders who contend that they can carry the country admit that they cannot carry the states which are most necessary to national victory.

For three months before the war began, the trade balance was against the United States. That is to say, we were buying from other countries more goods than we were selling to them. In addition to that, our tourists were spending hundreds of millions annually abroad and we were spending other millions as interest on American bonds and dividends on American stock held in other countries. With the outbreak of the war, the tide turned and now the total trade balance in our favor has amounted to over $3,000,000,000. Our tourists are necessarily spending their money at home. Millions of dollars of stocks and bonds have been sold back to us, and the interest and dividends remain here. These are facts, yet there are many people so false as to deny that returned prosperity is due to the war and many other people so foolish as to believe them.

In recognition of the remarkably effective work of the $145,000 lemon lobby, which delivered the Italian vote over to the Democratic party in 1912, the Democrats cut the tariff duty on lemons to the bone. Consul Samuel E. Shank, Palermo, Italy, reports that shipment of lemons to the United States, which will commence this coming November, will be materially reduced because of the unprecedented hot winds which blew July 3 and 4. One half of the summer crop had been gathered before the heat wave came, but that which would have been gathered in July, August and September was largely destroyed. Consul Shank estimates that the crop of 1916-17 will probably not amount to more than half a normal one. This means that the price of lemons is going up this fall, and we will hear Democratic stump speakers declaring that the reduction in the duty on lemons increased the price to the California producer, just as they talked about free wool and the increased price.

The Maine Election.

Says State Chairman C. S. Hatfield on the Maine election: "The decisive victory in the Maine election Monday has added to the confidence of the Republican voters of the nation. The magnitude of the triumph was entirely beyond the expectations of the Republican leaders, either of the state or nation. Maine voters emphatically showed their belief in America First and America Efficient. The Republicans elected a governor, defeating the present Democratic incumbent; named two United States senators, one of whom defeated a representative who had been in the upper branch for several years; chose a full delegation to Congress, carrying one supposedly strong Democratic district; and the Republicans will easily control both branches of the legislature.

"The attempt of Democratic leaders and newspapers to discount the showing made is as ludicrous as it is ineffective. The voice of the nation in November has been clearly registered by the advance prophesy of the voters in Maine Monday.

"No labored explanation can minimize the far-reaching significance of the fact that the voters of Maine have spoken for real protection for American activities, after the artificial conditions of the present great war are ended, and in opposition to the shifty, ineffective, un-American policies of the present national administration.

"Ohio is today fighting for the same principles that won in Maine. We have been confident of the people's support of these sentiments, but the result Monday naturally increases the confidence we have had. The result in Ohio in November will be as decisive for Republican victory as was that in Maine."

Republicans Preparing for a Great Opening.

Dayton is preparing for the biggest Republican campaign opening ever held in the state of Ohio. Hon. Charles E. Hughes, Republican candidate for president, will spend the entire day, Monday, September 25, in the Gem City. On the program with Mr. Hughes will be Governor Frank B. Willis, Col. Myron T. Herrick, Charles W. Fairbanks, Republican candidate for vice president, and United States Senator Warren G. Harding. At no campaign opening ever held in this state have so many national figures been secured on the opening date.

The Republican presidential candidate will arrive in Dayton early Monday morning from Indianapolis, where he will be the Sunday guest of Mr. Fairbanks. At 10 o'clock he will make an address at the National Military Home and at noon he will be the guest of the Montgomery county committee at the Miami hotel. The lunch hour will be followed by a mammoth parade through the principal streets of the city.

Ohio's Republican campaign will be officially opened at 2:30 o'clock at the Montgomery county fair grounds, where Hughes, Governor Willis, Col. Herrick, Mr. Fairbanks and Senator Harding will all deliver addresses. Mr. Hughes and the other guests will be guests of the Montgomery county committee again in the evening at the Miami hotel and at 8 o'clock a public reception will be held at Memorial hall.

Every Republican in Ohio who can should do his utmost to be present at this great occasion.

MCKINLEY'S WAR COST LESS BLOODSHED THAN WILSON'S PEACE

By Theodore Roosevelt.

Under President McKinley we had a war with Spain. Under President Wilson we are assured that we have had "peace" with Mexico. These are the words. Now for the deeds. During the war with Spain fewer Americans were killed by the Spaniards than have been killed by Mexicans during the present "peace" with Mexico. Let me repeat this. A greater number of Americans have been killed by Mexicans during these years, when we are officially informed that we have been at peace with them, than were killed by the Spaniards during our entire war with Spain. Moreover, when the war with Spain was through, it was through. But peace still continues to rage as furiously as ever in Mexico. Nor is this all. The instant effect of the outcome of the war with Spain was to put a stop to the dreadful butchery and starvation in Cuba and the Philippines, and the entry of both Cuba and the Philippines on a career of eight or ten years of peace and prosperity such as they had never known before in all their checkered history. But during these three years of Mr. Wilson's "peace" the Mexicans themselves have been butchered by their own bandits steadily and without intermission; and Mexican women and children have died by thousands—probably by scores of thousands—of starvation and of the diseases incident to starvation. In other words, Mr. McKinley's war cost less than peace and it reflected high honor on the American people; whereas Mr. Wilson's peace has been one of shame and dishonor for the American people, and one of ruin and bloodshed for the Mexicans.

Hughes Points the Way

The speech of the Republican candidate for president was a keynote speech indeed. Not one person in the great audience at the Carnegie hall meeting was in doubt for one moment as to just what he meant by everything he said.

His address was comprehensive, logical, clear and all sufficient for the occasion. There can be no dispute as to this. Plainly Mr. Hughes is a man who "knows what he wants when he wants it," and it is the opinion of political authorities who heard him and who have since read his remarks that he knows also how to get it.

It was incumbent upon the Republican candidate to confine the scope of his remarks to the limitations of the administration of the government is merely an earnest of what the tone and the contents of his speeches will be when he gets on the stump.

At Carnegie hall Mr. Hughes advertised to every general question that is apt to be a serious issue in the campaign and in language that will be absolutely clear to every man or woman able to read he stated his opinions, his convictions and his purposes. On the stump he will argue those points in detail. As an orator he is eloquent, his personality attractive, and his marshaling of facts so cohesive that he holds his audience to the end. He makes it easy for them to follow him, and his points are not lost.

There was nothing equivocal, nothing apologetic in the Republican candidate's speech of acceptance. He called a spade a spade, and the unanimous opinion of those who heard him was that he shot to the center and rang the bell. The Republican campaign is now open, and those who will speak and write and work for the success of the Republican ticket can wish for no more adequate campaign document, no more satisfactory statement of issues than are found in the candidate's salutatory.

The president had boldly signed the Pork river and harbor bill, and his facile pen is dripping with ink eager to attach itself to a pork public buildings bill.

The friendliest apologists of the president's part in the profligate waste of money wrung from the people by oppressive taxation have nothing better to say for him than that it is hardly fair to expect a man to say "I forbidd" in his presidential year when he is a candidate.

The foregoing words describing the profligate waste of the people's money with executive approval are taken without change from a plank of the platform on which Woodrow Wilson was elected in 1912.

"We denounce the profligate waste of money wrung from the people by oppressive taxation through the lavish appropriations of recent Republican congresses, which have kept taxes high and reduced the purchasing power of the people's toil. We demand a return so that simplicity and economy which befits a democratic government."

How much is now left of the principles declared and the promises registered at Baltimore as inducements to citizens to vote for Wilson.

Possibly it is because he and his party have been such reckless, such wholesale repudiators of the pledges of 1912 that few people remember or care to remember what pledges were made in his behalf about forty days ago at St. Louis—New York Sun.

THE AMERICAN WORKING MAN SHALL NOT SUFFER

The Republican party stands for the principle of protection. We must apply that principle fairly, without abuses, in as self-entitled a manner as possible; and congress should be aided by the investigations of an expert body. We stand for the safeguarding of our economic independence, for the development of American industry, for the maintenance of American standards of living. We propose that in the competitive struggle that is about to come the American workingman shall not suffer.—From Mr. Hughes' Speech of Acceptance.

NO PROTECTIVE MEASURE FROM DEMOCRATIC CONGRESS.

"You couldn't get a protective measure out of a Democratic congress sectionally organized any more than you could get a revival meeting out of a disorderly house."—From Mr. Hughes' Speech at Chicago.

BURSTING A BUBBLE.

The Democrats who sought a criticism from Dr. Charles W. Elliot of Mr. Hughes' acceptance of the presidential nomination got one, but not the kind they wanted. Dr. Elliot was heartless. Instead of helping the Democrats keep the supreme court bubble in the air he pricked it with a pin when in his letter he said of Mr. Hughes' action:

"Most Americans will think that, having tried the life of a governor and the life of a justice of the supreme court, he had a right to give effect to his preference for political service."

Mr. Lansing is credited with the belief that the case against Great Britain on account of the blacklist is so weak that it ought not to be pressed. What, then, did Mr. Polk mean when he called the attention of the British government, "in the gravest terms," to "the many serious consequences" to be apprehended if it were not withdrawn?
